

The World of Hexad

There was darkness everywhere then out of the darkness six majestic crystal orbs came together and formed one egg. For two thousand years the egg continued to grow. After two thousand years the egg started shaking vigorously and pieces started flaking away, the flakes shimmered as they dissolved revealing six gods. The gods couldn't move at first because they were paralysed. After ten days the gods started to grow and began to separate from each other.

There were three female gods called Marine, Wild and Mortana and there were three male gods called Ivory, Lumin and Vinus. The gods and goddesses were brothers and sisters. The family of gods didn't want to be separated, it made them feel weak, sad, depressed and upset. They decided they needed to create something to join them back together, so they started to create a world.

Lumin and Wild went north to create their parts of the world, Marine and Vinus went south. Mortana went west and Ivory went east.

Mortana wanted to create life in the world that would take care of everything. So she made a human from a single strand of her hair and the love in her heart. The more humans she made the stronger she became. The more love she gave the more she got back.

Marine created water from her tears as she thought about being separated from her family. She made rivers, oceans, streams, seas and rain. The more tears she cried the less upset she became about the separation.

Ivory was born a shapeshifter and loved to change into the animals he imagined in his mind. His imagination was so powerful that when he changed into an animal it created another. Soon he had created all the animals, fish and birds that roam today. To cure his loneliness he ran with herds of animals and swam with pods of dolphins.

Wild was very angry and upset about being separated from her family so used her flashing blue eyes to create the skies. The swishing of her hair to create the wind. Her temper became the thunder and her frustration and tenseness became the lightning.

Lumin had always shone very bright, so bright that his brothers and sisters could not look at him or they would go blind. Lumin took some of his light and created the sun, the moon and stars. When he had finished he was no longer too bright and his brothers and sisters could see him clearly.

Vinus had a heavy belt that dug into his skin and was very uncomfortable. It was made from wood, stone, leaves and sap. Vinus took pieces of his belt and created trees, mountains, rocks, plants, bushes and flowers. The more he made the lighter and more comfortable his belt became.

After creating all the separate parts of their world the six brothers and sisters came back together and were complete. The family of gods had six messages to tell the humans who lived on their creation.

Mortana told the first humans they must respect the world that the six gods had made for them and to pass it on to the next generations in the same condition as it was founded.

Mortana told the humans to respect each other and that all life has value.

Vinus told the humans to be gardeners to all the plants, trees and earth and to never take them for granted.

Lumin told the humans to be curious and to learn about the sun, moon and stars and to appreciate their importance.

Wild told the humans never to underestimate the power and force of the weather . Never to think that they are stronger or more clever than the winds, snows, sun and rain or they will kill you.

Ivory told the humans they must only kill the animals needed for food. Animals must never be hunted for sport, wasted, killed for greed or treated cruelly. Or he would tell the animal kingdom to rise up and destroy them all.

Marine asked humans to respect the oceans, seas, rivers and streams. Use the water that is needed; they must never poison them. If the water becomes polluted she would flood the world.

The humans agreed to all of these rules and promised to take care of the world. When the humans looked up into the night sky they could see the constellations of the six gods of Hexad joined forever by their beautiful creation and never to be separated again.
